June 6, 1938,

TO THE CLASS OF JUNE 1938:

You are about to leave Eastern. I hope that in the years to come you will always remember that the good name of the school depends on you.

Your life, your words and deeds, will reflect honor or shame not only on yourselves but also on your families and on your school.

May you continue to develop your mental capacities and place them always on the side of honor and right, not as pleasure seekers living only for amusement, not as materialists seeking only money, but as unselfish citizens seeking to serve city, state, and nation.

Your principal,
FRED'K. WM. OSWALD, JR.

Dear Seniors,

The writing of this message for the "Eastern" to the Class of June 1938 is one of the most difficult tasks I have faced as your grade adviser. I find it so very difficult because my emotions at this time are somewhat confused. I realize that your graduation marks the end of a three-year relationship between us that I would like to prolong, yet I am indeed very happy that you are about to graduate, for your graduation at this time indicates SUCCESS. Your graduation indicates your readiness to take your chosen place in society and to achieve greater goals.

I will always look back upon these past three years with joy and I hope you will occasionally find time to think of me as you climb your ladder of success.

Sincerely yours,

ABRAHAM M. FRIEDMAN

First the challenge,
Then the leap and the swift come
Fluted bark grooving the warm flesh,
Up, up through the snapping twigs
To the swaying crest and the giddy height,
The frightened peak,
Then the screaming urge,
And the plunge.

The Plunge

By Philip Lerner

The Museum

By Joseph Paperofsky

Curious pretenders
Gaze with wonder;
Affected nonchalance,
Superficial ponder;
Nodding assent
To false comprehension
Of works of art
And queer invention;
Medieval pageantry
In conspicuous display,
Asia's ancient lore
The polished walls array—
They look with awe
At color, beauty blending,—
Ignorant individuals
Still pretending.

The thunder beat of unshod hooves
Cuts sudden grooves
Of sound
Into the ground,
Wide-eyed, with speed unchecked,
Foam-flecked,
Flying mane caught in the wind,
Fear-jawed,
Through the waving pampas grass
The pounding legs pass
In a wild rataplan—
Afraid of man.

A MODERN SARAH

By LEAH WILHELM

Sara was a modern girl, and she was proud to tell this to the world. Look, she had even changed her name from Sarah to Sara. Didn't it look more—aristocratic—the new way? Oh, she was modern in a lot of different ways, too. One of her pet schemes was what her friends had nicknamed "The Saturday Matinee (Re)Treat," for this was the time when the gang of girls went down to the Commodore for an early show, and after that, to Diamond's for a luscious banana split—"with plenty of whipped cream on top, too." Naturally, Sara had to sneak out of the house before her father saw her. Sara used to say, "Dad's just an old religious fool. Acts so silly about an old fashioned thing! Why!"

But then, maybe old-fashioned dad did suspect something. Last week, when she had come in from the show with a nonchalant "Lo, dad," the beseeching pathetic look he had given her had almost done something to her. But only—almost. After all, religion was an old fashioned thing, wasn't it? For old people, O.K.—or in Europe . . . But I'm a modern American girl. Why bother with such an old thing, anyway . . .

So, you see, Sara was modern.

The high holiday season was on and almost over. Try as she did to resist, some of the spirit was getting into Sara and she decided to do something about it. So she and the girls made a plan to celebrate—and to go on a little spree to the Chinks around the corner and have a little fun—"to celebrate Yom Kippur, the most sacred of all holy days! Ha! Ha! That's a good one—'sacred'—isn't it a scream? Some fun . . . And of course, Rita, if you drop a gentle hint to your brother to drop around with the gang . . . just a gentle hint mind you, well, we can have some fun, huh!"

And so they went and had a good time; so good, in fact that it put Sara in a good mood. So she said, "Well, I may as well humor dad along and drop into the synagogue tomorrow afternoon. It's an old-fashioned idea, but I'll humor the old guy along."

At about half past five the following day, Sara tiptoed into the old, rickety synagogue. The place consisted of one big room. In the center was the wooden pulpit and all around that were rows of benches, upon which were sitting men and boys. In the back was a curtain, cutting off a section for the women. Sara stood flat against the wall, trying to catch a glimpse of her father, to show him that she had come, and as she waited, she watched and saw.

Although the room was crowded, it did not appear so. On the platform were a few men reading aloud and the men were sitting slumped murmuring to themselves, praying quietly. The entire atmosphere was one of quiet prayer, restrained and subdued outwardly, but ever anxious, pushing from the inside out. From the women's section came a steady low sobbing quiet desperate prayer. The men also unashamedly wept and prayed aloud. There was a spirit of humble men humble yet hopeful despairing yet anxious eager repenting. And Sara stood there, and that spirit of numbness swept through her. The last rays of sun rested in this quiet atmosphere against the wall bushes with shame when caught peeking into this ethereal scene. And, although wanting to linger here, felt humbled and crept away. And Sara stood still.

It was nearing the end of this fast day. Time was growing short. Sentence was soon to be pronounced for the defendants. And the whole congregation was praying as if it were one voice. A surging wave flowed from the core of each soul, ran over the cracks and ruts of each sobbing breast. It was the voice of a guilty defendant pleading to a Judge for mercy. And Sara stood and her heart prayed too.

And then, the clear call of the Shofar, the ram's horn—the call of the faithful shepherd to his wandering sheep, calling, taking them back to the fold.

The fast was over, "Leshona haba biyarushalayum"—the cry of a hungry people hungry for mercy, hungry for their land, and more practically, hungry for food. And everyone was hurrying home. Sara hurried home, too.

The next morning, when Sara woke up, it was raining; a good, clear, brisk rain. But Sara woke up tired and lazy. She lay in bed thinking for a while. Wasn't it funny? She had almost become religious yesterday—she of all people. Queer how it happened. Lucky she hadn't been taken in with all that sentimental old stuff. Thank heavens I'm a modern girl and can't be fooled with all that tomfoolery. O. K., mom. I'm coming.

Yes, ma'am. Sara sure was a modern girl.

The Storm

By Charles Ancrum

All was silent, hot, and heavy,
Not a rustle, not a murmur;
Silent as the ghostly midnight,
Still and quiet as the northland.
Then with lowly muttering rumbles
Growing louder, dense in volume
Came the northwind and its brothers,
Thunder and the flashing lightning.
Man and beast both fled in terror
Trees were tossed as children's playthings
And the rain came down in torrents
Drenching all that lay beneath it
Then the thunder passed to westward
With its rumble growing fainter
And the black clouds slowly followed,
Giving way to glorious sunshine.

HALF WISE SAYINGS

By HYMAN DANOWITZ

It is most interesting to note in our body of proverbs how contradictory many of these adages can be. The basic reason for these contradictions lies in the two opposing schools of thought; one advocates, "Make way for tomorrow"; the other, "Be merry for tomorrow you die."

Let us look into the banter that arises from conflicting proverbs. The Stoics, especially Benjamin Franklin, would say, "A penny saved is a penny earned," and "Save for a rainy day." "To what avail?" the Epicurians will answer, "A fool and his money are soon parted." For the proverb, "Never put off til tomorrow what you can do today," there is the answer, "There is always tomorrow." We have learned many a lesson from the fable of the ant and the grasshopper, but a long standing motto among the Italians has been, "It is charming to be idle." A famous Frenchman once said, "It is worse than a crime; it is a blunder." Did he forget that "To err is human?" How silly it is to "Look before you leap," when "He who hesitates is lost."

I now come to the great thinker, Descartes, whose motto was, "I think, therefore I am." To him, mind was the criterion of living. Yet, for all his thoughts, he did not change the world. Arguments and theories pertaining to philosophical points of view have never changed the world despite the fact "The pen is mightier than the sword." In the words of the immortal Khayyam:

"Myself when young did eagerly frequent
Doctor and Saint and heard great Argument
About it and about—but evermore
Came out the same Door as in I went."

I would like to close with a trilogy which runs beyond the ridiculous: "Truth conquers all," "Love conquers all," and "Work conquers all." Geometrically speaking, things equal to same thing are equal to each other. Therefore truth must be love and love must be truth; work must be truth, and truth must be work, strangest of all, however, is the remaining equation, love must be work.

April Snow

By Philip Lerner

Days were soft, young blood began to sing,
Quickened freshets burst into a run,
And swift, new life, placing trust in Spring,
Too soon worked upward in the sun.

Too soon the stiffened earth, grown free,
Thrust forth stark blades of curious green,
Blinking in the light; too soon the tree
Awakening, drew life-blood, fresh and clean.

And white magnolias, bursting with suspense,
Bared their pale faces in countless rows;
Too soon they throbbed, to lie a vain expense,
Wilted extravagance on root-white boughs.

A swift shroud, slipping softly to the earth,
Cut deep and piercing with a chilling blow:
Fragrant blossoms fringing Spring's new birth,
Half-open buds ranged still-born in the snow.

Life

By Abraham Elfenbein

I dropped the film into the tray,
And watched the acid eat its way
Through gelatine and celluloid,
Until from out the blackest void
My face appeared and stared at me—
And blurred into infinity . . .

To Miss Zollenhofer

Who says Miss Zollenhofer will retire?
Has music ceased when silent is the lyre?
 Pray tell me, what have years to do with youth,—
Or residence, with those she did inspire?

No accolade, contrived by human art,
Can they bestow, nor compensate in part,
 Who've known the incandescence of her mind,
Who've felt the ministrations of her heart.

As long as Eastern District bears its name,
Will those who cherish merit hers proclaim.
Who says Miss Zollenhofer will retire,
He says there is no honor here, or fame.

Although the saying goes, "a woman's crowning glory is her hair,"

Sarah can prove that the
'eyes' have it.

COHEN, SYLVIA

Junior A to Secretary of Church, Club, Hebrew
Club, Hebrew Club, German
Club, Secretary, Miss J.
del, Personality Club, & by

Her temper is quite serene;
She has a charming way.

A ready smile, a pleasant
mien,

What more is there to say?

COOK, CHARLES

Track Team, Knock Com-tee, President of Class (5th Term), Vice President of Class
(8th Term), Vice President of History Class, Regents Duty,

E. Squad.

A bit of Wordsworth, Shelley,
Keats.

And a dash of Shakespeare.

CRESPIN, ALICE

Opera Club Secretary, Mrs.
Serge, President of Class,
Knock Committee, Secretaries
Club, Dance Club, Honor Roll.

To beat Donald Duck is her ambition;

She puts in Martha Raye for good measure.

She beats them both by fair competition,

But modestly says, "It's merely a pleasure."

CROVINA, PAULINE

Personality Club, French Club,
Art Weaving Club.

An efficient maid indeed,

In business she is sure to succeed.

CUDDAHY, NICHOLAS

Traffic and Patrol Squads, Newman Club.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder.

The teachers must like him an awful lot.

DALTON, DOROTHY

The fear of being silent makes me mute.

DEDE, CARMINE

Honor Certificate
 1st Team and 1st Squad
 He keeps
 Out of trouble
 By looking guilty.

DINERSTEIN HELEN

1st Team and 1st Squad
 Why should I frown and get wrinkles,
 When I can smile and get dimples?

DIPAOLA, ARTHUR

Tall in stature and wavy hair,
 He's sure to win a maiden fair.

DLUGOSZ, JOSEPHINE

Three people I like best:
 Miss Dlugosz, Josephine, and myself.

DOBKOWSKY, HELEN

Here's one I like with loads of charm,
 But it's regretful she can't be calm.

DONINGER RUTH

The boys look at her for only a short while,
 Because she dazzles them with her gorgeous smile.
 They can't help admiring one who's so sweet,
 For she's cute, clever, and very petite.

DOROGUSKER, FREIDA

As still as the night—so calm
 as the sea,
 Her charm draws friends, as honey a bee.

DENARO, DOMINICK

I am a gentleman of blood and breeding.

DE SANTIS, HELEN

Squad (Annex II), Glee Club.
 What has Shirley Temple got that I haven't?

DIDONATO, CARMINE

When he blows his horn,
 You should hear that thing mourn.

DINERSTEIN, ELAINE

Here's a girl who will succeed
 Her mind works with clearness efficiency and speed.

*give me a letter
 DE MATTEO ANTONETTE
 she's a girl no one can find
 Sweet, thoughtful, and very kind*

*Luck & Success

SOCIETY

The Social Register and the Washington Directory were mixed together very well last night, flavored with champagne, and sent home with hangovers after having had a very good time. It all added up to one swell inaugural ball—thanks to the capable hostesses, the Secretaries' Union, represented by Marie Camputaro, secretary to the silver-tongued Senator Harry Silbergait, and Hilda Schwartz, secretary to the aged and venerable Hon. Justice Abraham Friedman.

Spice was added by the presence of the four rivals for the "Queen o' Screen" title: Grace Berg, Edith Draznin, Beatrice Rothfeld, and Gussie Schecter. Rette Weberman, scream sensation of the season, entertained with her peculiar, popular, imitable brand of humor.

PRESIDENT LERNER

IS INAUGURATED

"A FOOTBALL IN EVERY BACKYARD"

Amid wild shouting and cheering of thousands who stood in the rain to watch the spectacle, Philip Lerner, second unanimously elected president of the United States, was inaugurated into office. Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Leon J. Nussbaum administered the oath to the President and to Vice-President Joseph Papinofsky, Lerner's right hand man.

Later on, in the White House, Miss Sylvia Milgrim, the President's charming confidential secretary, gave out this state-

ANNOUNCED

A bomb was thrown into political circles here today with the announcement of the appointment of a woman to the important position of Secretary of the Treasury. The choice of the Miriam to lead her country out of the Red is Ruthie Applebaum. Said President Lerner when he made the appointment public, "It takes a femme to collect money. Why, I'll bet Ruthie even gold-digs the war debts!"

The other appointees are as

Roaming through the village last night, Yours Truly was duly frightened by a sudden Boom! "Explosion," said my mind, but I bravely went on to see what poor building had broken in. Imagine my surprise to find that it was no building, but just a table. It seems that at the really exclusive Club 000012, two otherwise sanely sober scientists were giving a party to honor the mysterious visiting Russian Princess Olga Prokofeff. The two scientists were giving an impromptu illustrated lecture on "Came the Big Apple!"—on the table. Hence the caved-in table. The two otherwise s. s. s. were—whisper—Prof. Hy Fialkov, discoverer of the deadly K (Katzenjammer) Ray, and Prof. Albert Adell, perfector of

The highlight of the evening, however, was the grand entrance of Miss Helena van Dinerstein, one of the season's (what season?) most popular deb's, leaning on the arm of that sportsman millionaire and one of the best catches of the season, Joe Topol. Helena wore a simply stunning cape of ermine trimmed with silver fox, a strikingly beautiful combination.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The class of June, 1938, of the Eastern District High School of Brooklyn, New York, will hold a reunion this Saturday evening at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in Washington, D. C. It is rumored that some famous names will be present. $100 a plate.

ment to the press. Lerner's message to the people has a familiar ring to it. He says, "I promise a football in every backyard if the citizens cooperate with the new administration." Flieger wishes Lerner loads of luck!

We also wish to extend our condolences to those plucky ladies, Yolande Scibelle and Pearl Newirth, the defeated candidates. At their campaign headquarters yesterday, Eleanor Bromer, their manager, and chairlady of the "Women-for-Offices" Party, spunkily said in a humorous imitation of a haughty voice, "Yolanda and Pearl now have the double honor of being the first women to run for such offices in the United States and also the first women to be defeated for this." Better luck next time, girls!

has been expected for some time. Joseph Meyerson, the well known anti-capitalist man of New York City and spokesman of the "working" class, is Secretary of Labor. Robert Ovrin, chairman of the Republican National Committee, is Secretary of State. Hush, and I'll tell you a secret: There are rumors going around that this staid old conservative started his political career on a soap box while still attending high school in Brooklyn, New York. However, all rumors are denied. Can it be that his friendly political rival, Ruth Geiger, started it all?

Antonio Serino, motion picture magnate, is Secretary of Theaters and Motion Pictures. Edward Spierer, noted surgeon, is Secretary of the Interior, appropriately enough.

FLASH

Flash! Frankie Turner copped the National Basketball Championship and the International Handball Championship at the Athletic Meet today. Strong contenders, Patsy Bishop and "Pickles" Gold, charge that Frankie's angelic smile bewitched the judges. However, all rumors have been denied. Said Frankie, "I owe it all to being a good boy and going to bed on time!"

THE SPORTS' PARADE

By HAROLD COHEN

BASKETBALL

With the close of this year's season, Eastern lost three of its greatest all-around athletes: Frank Turner, Robert Kane, and Bernard Bishop. It will be a long time before Eastern will again have three such fine players and sportsmen on the same team. With Spring practice over, Coach Lebowitz is smiling and that means plenty. The average height of this year's team is greater than last year's. What the team lacks in experience they make up in spirit and fight. It is a team composed of third and fourth termers. It is hoped that they will bring a championship banner into Eastern's trophy room.

TRACK

The track team has tried so hard to be successful that it has been impossible to keep them out of the limelight. It has won three meets and lost two. Its most impressive victory was over Townsend Harris by the count of 57-23. Another brilliant victory was over the Metropolitan Vocational H. S. by the score of 49-32.

Important to the success of this year's team were the fine showings of B. Wiseman (Capt.), Yagoda, Accardi, Stark, Zwieble and Herzlich. The team has worked as a unit and we can be proud to say that they have never stopped trying to win.

FENCING

The team, one Easternites can be proud of, played in twenty-two matches this year and lost only four. One went to Stuyvesant, the city champion, and another to Clinton by a close score. Coach Offenthal has divided his group into three divisions: the varsity, junior varsity, and junior. In this way everybody has to hustle to keep his position. The team led by J. Levin (Capt.) along with L. Nussbaum and J. Mika gained much prestige for Eastern. With the exception of a few graduates, the same team will again represent Eastern and will again be expected to have a highly successful season.

RIFLE

Our Sports Parade this year would not be complete without mentioning the excellent work of our rifle squad. This year's team was so good it placed third in the C. C. N. Y. Inter-Scholastic match. Several rifles have been loaned to the team by the U. S. Government. A bond was signed by the General Organization in order to bring this about. Next year's team will be led by Bogen and Lipshitz who have turned in perfect scores. Only a few members will be lost by graduation and it is hoped and expected that the team will accomplish great things next year.

HANDBALL

Our handball team, along with the other Eastern teams this year, placed high in its division of the P. S. A. L. The team this year beat Lane by the score of 4-2, Hamilton 4-1, and Erasmus 4-1. Its only defeat was to Abraham Lincoln by the count of 5-0. In this match with Lincoln, which reputedly has the best team in the city, Turner lost by the score of 21-20 and Kane by the score of 21-19. These figures show how really close the match was. With Goldstein and Vitale heading next year's team, we can again look forward to a successful season.

SWIMMING

In spite of the lack of material, our swimming men have done wonders. In a meet against Brooklyn Automotive Trades, the champion of all vocational high schools, Eastern came out on top. Our boys did this in no uncertain manner by the count of 36-18.

This team can use members who know how to swim and are able to stand up under strain. With a little help from the student body, swimming can become a major sport in this school. Capt. J. Badinger, and G. Weinberg who have been constant point earners for the team, and others who are graduating will have to be replaced next term.

A black and white line drawing titled "ACTIVITIES" in a vertical column on the right side. The drawing depicts a man in a suit playing a guitar, a woman in a dress playing a harp, and various musical instruments and objects floating around them. The man is on the left, playing a guitar. The woman is on the right, playing a harp. There are several floating objects: a basketball, a tennis racket, a baseball bat, a baseball, a tennis ball, a basketball, a tennis racket, a baseball bat, a baseball, a tennis ball, a basketball, a tennis racket, a baseball bat, a baseball, a tennis ball. The drawing is signed "JENNIE PIASECKI" in the bottom left corner.

Opportunity Doesn't Merely Knock . . . IT CLAMORS

There's always room in business for the man (or woman) who is versatile . . . who can fit his ability to the work at hand. For such a person, opportunity doesn't merely knock—it clamors!

A degree of Bachelor of Science in Pharmacy places you in this category—because THIS degree prepares you for not just one but a veritable multitude of different kinds of positions.

As a graduate of the Long Island University Brooklyn College of Pharmacy, your commercial value (to employer and yourself) will be greatly increased—because THIS college provides training that is thorough. Its Basic Course is a foundation for the study of Medicine and Dentistry. It has two special courses in Cosmetology. It has elective courses which develop your individual talents. It has complete facilities and equipment in every department, including the gymnasium. Best of all, it is conveniently reached by all lines of transportation, the 8th Ave. subway being but a few steps away. Learn more about this degree and this College. Send for a copy of our Bulletin of Information. It's free.

You are invited to call at the College to discuss your individual plans with Dean H. H. Schaefer

INDEPENDENCE must still be EARNED

*"A man who does not bother to educate himself, who wants only easy money regardless of the consequences to others, who declines to work if he can be supported by somebody else, who thinks he has a right to all he wants, who thinks only of claims and not of duties . . .
is not likely to succeed."*

*James Truslow Adams, in New York Times Magazine,
February 21, 1937*

Success is founded on saving.
Don't let any one delude you into thinking otherwise. You can't do anything with the money you have spent. Money you save is power you build to help you achieve whatever you want.
